Spotlight: 1100 Wilshire

October 15, 2007

Les Deux and Hyde are so last month. In fact, going out to party isn't even necessary anymore with all the rooftop party pads springing up around town. With open space limited and the price of land high, developers of new condo buildings are investing in sky-high patios for the residents' pleasure.

The folks at the 228-unit building 1100 Wilshire have done just that with a beautiful mid-building patio, affectionately called Deck 17 (because of its location on the 17th floor). In addition to killer views, the space features resort-quality amenities with at-home comfort, including:

Cabanas and Lounge Beds

Are we suddenly hanging out by the pool at the Palms in Vegas? That is certainly what it looks like with these VIP-style furnished cabanas and contemporary, stylish beds lining the pool deck. No '80-s plastic patio furniture here – just refined comfort for ideal tanning.

Fire Pit Cove

Bring out the s'mores on the upcoming chilly fall nights and enjoy a fireplace that won't overheat your whole house. And with intimate seating around the pit, it's also a great place to cozy up and enjoy a glass of wine.

Pool and Elevated Spa

Pools are a pretty hot commodity in L.A., and a definite plus for potential buyers. You'd think you were swimming at the Standard with all the sun-bunnies that relax the day away on Deck 17, so dive in and get some exercise while meeting the neighbors.

Private Grill Area

Mingling is great, but sometimes it's good to have a little privacy for your own soiree. Residents have access to booking the private grill area, and whether you're actually grilling or not, the space comes complete with two stainless steel BBQs and wet bars (meaning all you need are a few supplies and some eager friends).
